Biographical note

Alfred Noyes was born September 16, 1880 at Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, England to Alfred Noyes and Amelia Adams, née Rowley. He entered Exeter College in 1898 with the intention of taking a degree in English. Rather than complete his final examinations, Noyes opted to keep an appointment with London publisher Grant Richards. The meeting resulted in the publication of his first book of poems, The Loom of Years (1902). Several more volumes of poetry soon followed. Noyes composed his verse in a style consciously descended from Tennyson and the romantic poets and was a staunch opponent of what he deemed "modernism" in literature.

In 1907, Noyes married Garnett Upham, née Daniels, the daughter of American consul Colonel Byron Gordon Daniels. Strengthening his ties to America, in 1911 Noyes began a lecture tour of the U.S. that included delivery of the Lowell Lecture at Harvard University (1913) and resulted in his being appointed Murray professor of English literature at Princeton University (1914-1923). This tenure was interrupted by the First World War. Rejected from military service because of poor eyesight, Noyes began work in the newsroom of the British Foreign Office in 1916. Shortly thereafter, he was shown the incriminating diaries of former British diplomat Roger Casement, who was convicted of treason for his involvement in the 1916 Easter Rising. Although Noyes believed the diaries to be authentic at the time, he later changed his opinion and worked for Casement's vindication as late as 1957 when he published The Accusing Ghost of Roger Casement.

In 1926, Noyes's wife died. The following year, he joined the Roman Catholic Church. Noyes maintained that his conversion was motivated not by apologists but primarily by nineteenth century agnostics, as reflected in The Unknown God (1934) and his controversial biography Voltaire (1936). In September of 1927, Noyes married Mary Angela Mayne, widow of Richard Weld-Blundell and member of an old Catholic family. In 1929, they settled on the Isle of Wight. Their home there would be the inspiration for the popular Orchard's Bay (1939).

In 1940-1941, Noyes and his family moved to America and Canada, where he lectured and promoted cooperation between the U.S. and Great Britain. His eyesight had continued to deteriorate, and a devastating surgery for glaucoma in the mid-1940's left him unable to read. Noyes remained in California for some time before returning to the Isle of Wight in 1949.

Throughout his career, Noyes garnered popular acclaim for his lectures and public readings, received honorary doctorates from Yale, Glasgow, Berkeley and Syracuse, was involved in two public controversies and was named a Commander of the British Empire (1918). Best known for his poem "The Highwayman," Alfred Noyes was a leading man of letters who produced works of poetry and criticism, fiction (including short stories and novels), non-fiction, essays, plays and lectures. His works were adapted for the screen, the stage, and set to music. He died on June 28, 1958.

Scope and Contents

The Alfred Noyes Papers are composed mainly of the personal and professional correspondence of Alfred Noyes and his extended family as well as manuscripts and typescripts of Noyes's poetry and prose.

Among the correspondents represented are many notable social, political, and literary figures, including various signatories arranged by Noyes in an autograph collection. Within the professional correspondence are letters detailing Noyes's American lecture tours, reviews of his work, as well as "letters to the editor" drafted by Noyes.

The collection contains published and unpublished poetry, plays, short stories, novels and works of nonfiction. The majority of manuscript material in this collection is undated, but can be assumed to span the length of Alfred Noyes's career. Of note are an early manuscript version of "The Highwayman," the first edition manuscripts of The Secret of Pooduck Island and The Devil Takes a Holiday, and early drafts of Orchard's Bay and The Unknown God. The papers also include correspondence, research, and manuscript items pertaining to Roger Casement and Noyes's involvement in his case (1916-1958) as well as Noyes's controversial biography of Voltaire (1936-1942).

The collection also contains notebooks and diaries by Noyes (which feature both poetry and prose) as well as the diaries of members of the Noyes family (1874-1932). Also present are manuscripts of poetry (including tribute poems to Noyes), plays and fiction by authors other than Noyes (1898-1957), as well as manuscripts, typescripts, and several printed editions of nonfiction works either about Noyes or collected by him (1913-1958). The remainder of the collection is composed of musical scores inspired by Noyes's poetry; financial, genealogical, and other papers of Noyes and his family (1906-1961); photographs and other visual materials; audio recordings (including recordings of four poems by Noyes); artifacts; printed materials; and press clippings.

Arrangement

Arranged in sixteen series. I. Correspondence; II. Poetry; III. Fiction; IV. Plays; V: Non-fiction; VI. Roger Casement controversy; VII. Voltaire controversy; VIII. Notebooks and diaries; IX. Music inspired by Noyes's poetry; X. Financial documents; XI. Noyes family genealogy and other papers; XII. Photographs and visual materials; XIII. Audio recordings; XIV. Artifacts; XV. Printed materials; and XVI. Press clippings.

Subseries B: Professional, 1900-1960

Scope and Contents

Also includes some correspondence about Noyes where Noyes himself is not one of the correspondents. The term "Third Party" has been used on folders to indicate when this is the case.

Arrangement

Arranged alphabetically; however, in cases where multiple organizations began with the same word, but there is not a large quantity from any one, those are grouped by first word (e.g. "Catholic --").

Sub-Subseries 1: General, 1900-1958, undated

Scope and Contents

Letters and postcards exchanged by Alfred Noyes and professional and business correspondents -- specifically agents, editors, and publishers -- including A.P. Watt and Sons; Blackwood and Sons; J.P. Lippincott Company; John Murray Publishers; Sheed and Ward; and Frederick A. Stokes Company. The Feakins correspondence spans a period of thirty-three years and includes letters, schedules, and memoranda regarding lectures and tours Noyes made in North America (1913-1946). Among the other professional correspondents are editors of magazines, monthlies, and newspapers, as well as representatives of colleges, universities, and alumni clubs. This subseries also contains correspondence from societies and representatives of government organizations and correspondence regarding the nomination of Alfred Noyes for the Nobel Prize in Literature.

Arrangement

Correspondence in this subseries has been arranged alphabetically; however, in cases where multiple organizations began with the same word, but there is not a large quantity from any one, those are grouped by first word (e.g. "Catholic --"). Professional correspondence is alphabetized by organization, and, in some cases, the primary correspondent's name is included in parentheses (e.g. "Boston College (Francis Sweeney, SJ)").

Sub-Subseries 2: Letters to the editor, 1914-1949, undated

Scope and Contents

Letters to the editor, primarily by Noyes, on a range of topics, including religion, literature, and science. Titles of letters are given in quotation marks; untitled letters are listed by subject matter. Of note is Noyes's reply to Julian S. Huxley's controversial article on science and religion (published in Discovery), as well as his responses to reviews of his books. Also includes letters to the editor by authors other than Noyes, many of which refer to Noyes or his work.

Sub-Subseries 4: Fan mail, 1902-1960, undated

Scope and Contents

Primarily letters of appreciation for Noyes's books, poetry, lectures, and broadcasts. Although most are addressed directly to Noyes, some were forwarded to him. Also includes requests for autographs and printed materials.

Arrangement

Most dated and arranged chronologically; however, letters pertaining to Noyes's radio broadcasts are grouped separately and arranged chronologically within the group.

Series II: Poetry, 1898-1957, undated

Scope and Contents

Manuscripts and typescripts of published and unpublished poetry by Alfred Noyes. Of principal interest are an early manuscript draft of "The Highwayman" and several manuscript sections of "The Torch-bearers." This series also contains manuscripts and typescripts of poems sent to Noyes by other authors, including several written in tribute to him.

Arrangement

Poems by Noyes arranged alphabetically by title of poem, with unidentified poems and fragments placed at end of arranged materials. Poems by others arranged alphabetically by creator's surname.

Series VIII: Notebooks and diaries, 1874-1943, undated

Scope and Contents

Notebooks and diaries, starting with Noyes's tenure as a student at Exeter College, Oxford and spanning his career. They include drafts of fiction and nonfiction, essays, reviews, poetry, and plays. Several notebooks include poetry from The Torchbearers (1926-1930). Also includes notebooks written by Noyes's first and second wives, Garnett Daniels and Mary Angela Weld-Blundell, and several notebooks that Noyes used for his own writing after they had been discarded by a previous owner. These latter notebooks have been designated "shared notebooks." Most of the notebooks are undated; however, an estimate has been given.

Series XVI: Press clippings, 1905-1959

Scope and Contents

Newspaper and magazine clippings chronicling Alfred Noyes's life and the publication of his literary works. Clippings cover significant biographical events such as Noyes's two marriages and the birth of his children, as well as numerous obituaries for Noyes. Also includes published reviews of Noyes's works and summaries of his many lecture tours in the United States and Great Britain.

Arrangement

The clippings in each of the five scrapbooks are arranged chronologically. Approximately one third of the loose press clippings in this series have been organized chronologically. The remaining clippings have not been placed in chronological order.
